PARKING PLAN IS CONSIDERED BY CITY TRUSTEES

With Mayor H. H. Smith in the chair and all members present, the city trustees at their regular meeting last Monday night considered a petition from residents and property owners on Mission street, asking for a forty-five minute parking limit between Bepler street and Los Olivos avenue on the west side of Mission street, from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. The matter was referred to the ordinance committee, and action will probably be had at the next meeting of the trustees.

The light committee reported that light installation on Price street will be attended to as soon as the county supervisors accept the map of this street.

The building committee reported progress in the removal of several refugee shacks.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to investigate the cow nuisance in the Metropolis Homestead Tract reported that the owner of the cow has offered the animal for sale, and he was given a few weeks to dispose of it and thus abate the nuisance.

According to the pound committee, progress is being made in persuading the San Francisco Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Nnimals to patrol our city. The S. P. C. A. is fully organized and equipped to help us and would add greatly to the protection and comforts already offered by our city.

After the close of the regular meeting, the trustees met with a committee of fire commissioners to draw up several fire prevention laws. The most important suggestion dealt with the construction of open fire places. It was recommended that iron waste baskets be used, as many dangerous fires started from inflammable waste baskets.

EAGLES WILL HOLD CLASS INITIATION

Colma Vista-Grande Aerie No. 1848, Fraternal Order of Eagles, will hold their next big class initiation on November 18.

The "go-getters" of the Aerie are looking forward to having one of the largest classes in their history.

There will be a ritualistic contest between one of the past presidents of our local and a past president of San Francisco Aerie No. 61. This is the first time in years that such a contest has taken place. A large attendance on this special occasion is expected.

A social will follow, to add to the pleasure of the evening. A good time is phophecied for all who attend.

"MORE SUNSHINE" FOR DALY CITY

Another Sunshine Market, No. 47, will be opened in the near future at 6307-09 Mission street, Daly City.

"More Sunshine." That certainly sounds good. Just the thing that Daly City needs. This market will be of the latest type, carrying a full line of meat, produce and groceries, all departments being run by the Sunshine Stores Company.

The market will be the last word in an up to date place of business. The stock carried will be of the very best and the prices are right.

During the past two years, Sunshine's growth has been phenomenal. Very rapid strides have been made. A new improvement is made on each market, in order to give the public the very best service and attention as well as quality merchandise.

Larger and better stores help the community to grow. Put Daly City among the most prosperous communities by helping Sunshine to prosper. Make the slogan, "I Buy at Sunshine!" a habit.

DALY CITY ENTERS FOOTBALL LEAGUE

The Outcasts, formerly the Jefferson Outcasts, have reorganized and have entered the Spalding football league. Their first opponent will be the Antlers, which is the Junior Order of Elks.

In an interview with Morris ("Mo") Plansky, manager of the Outcasts, he reports the team in perfect condition and is confident of a victory. "Vic" Saarinen will again fill the berth of fullback, while Joe ("Doto") Millit will call signals. The end postions will be taken care of by Plansky and White. The game with the Antlers will be played Sunday at 2 o'clock at the Golden Gate Park stadium.

The Outcasts, now the only team representing Daly City, wish the people of Daly City to get behind the team and help to bring success to the boys. The first fifteen men on the team will receive gold footballs for their accomplishment.

WORDS OF PRAISE FROM A FORMER RESIDENT OF CITY

In Washington Irving's famous story, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," Rip Van Winkle, after his twenty years' sleep, returns to find himself a stranger in the little village on the Hudson where his boyhood and younger life was spent. Where he had known every man, dog and child, he found himself unknown, and even his wife refused to acknowledge him.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harper, the pioneer marshal of Daly City, visited old-time friends here after an absence of many years.

Mr. Harper said: "I felt a good deal like Rip Van Winkle on his return. But fortunately I haven't been asleep, so I can make some comparisons of Daly City of today and Daly City of the past with some of the other many cities I have seen in my absence.

"I will confess I felt that I was dreaming when I reached the top of the hill. In fact, I would have felt certain we had lost our way and landed in some place I had never seen before if the name Daly City on bank, post office and other places had not greeted me at every turn.

"To those who have been here continuously the marvelous changes of the past few years have come seemingly gradually, and like the growth of a child or the growing old of one of the family, are not so noticeable to you. When I was here we had some 'codfish aristocrats' who used to say when asked where they lived, 'Oh, in the suburbs!' They were actually ashamed to say they lived in Daly City.

"I have seen many cities," Mr. Harper continued, "many times the age of Daly City, which reminded me of the man who had been a failure all his life, going from one mishap to another, but always bragging about himself. At last he seemed to have lost every chance of anything to boast of. An acquaintance told him that, but he disputed it and still insisted that he had the toughest whiskers of any man in town.

"Daly City is one of the cleanest, trimmest looking towns I know of. Its business establishments have a live, up to date look usually lacking in a city so near a metropolis. Its schools, public buildings and homes look as if they would say: 'We have a lot of self respect and we respect the opinions of others, so we keep ourselves looking our best.'

"Then, too, there is an aliveness about the people you see on the streets, due no doubt to the inspiring air of our surroundings. Surely, if any city in California can claim a view, Daly City can prove her claim over all others. Mountain, valley, lake, ocean wherever you look, must all have their influence on those so surrounded."

"In some places," our former marshal went on, "they advertise a view, but you have to climb a hill or a six story building and look in exactly the right direction, not one inch to this side or that, to get it. You could take a man anywhere in Daly City and whirl him around in circles and bet ten to one he'd see a view, when he stopped, which few cities could equal and which none could surpass.

"'Vista Grande' the old Spaniards called it, and beautiful view it still is today because your builders have done everything to keep it so. While you boast few mansions, you have practically none of the 'dry-goods box' style of architecture. The school buildings and churches particularly have individuality."

"In fact," Mr. Harper concluded, "Daly City has avoided the temptation to which nearly all sister cities of the larger places like New York and Chicago have fallen a prey: In becoming bigger and older she has not lost her youthful beauty and charm, but has added unto them an hundred fold."

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

All services at Grace Presbyterian church last Sunday were well attended and much above the average.

Twenty-five young people attended the Christian Endeavor meeting, led by Mrs. Gatchell, and a most enjoyable and profitable time was had by all.

The Sunday school formed new classes to care for the scholars who were promoted last week in the Rally Day program.

This Sabbath Rev. Mr. McElhenny will preach in the evening at 8, and Mr. Gatchell will give a sermon lecture at Alvarado on "The Passion Play," and in the morning at Centerville on "Egypt, Past and Present."

The C. E. Society will meet at 7 p. m. on Sunday, with Miss Riddell as leader, and a full attendance of the young people is desired.

Orchestra practice is held each Thursday evening at 7 o'clock.

Why Not Have Racing?

The American people have long been noted for their love of clean sport. The recent world series, between the pennant winners of the two major leagues, the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yanks, drew hundreds of thousands of spectators who are interested in baseball, while the chances of the two teams to win the world's championship was the subject of discussion in every city, village and hamlet by the followers of the sport.

The football season, following fast upon the closing of the baseball campaign, is now in full swing. Football enthusiasts, it is said, outnumber the followers of baseball.

Boxing is a sport patronized by many, and has been legalized in California, under strict control of a boxing commission.

Now it is proposed to rejuvenate the "sport of kings" in California, and friends of racing have a golden opportunity to place the sport on the most substantial basis possible at the election on November 2.

The proposition for the legalization of the pari mutuel system of conducting races should, we believe, have the thoughtful consideration and approval of the voters of the state of California.

We believe that the majority of the people of the state want racing restored in California, and under conditions which will make the sport as clean as any of the other sports enjoyed by a free citizenship.

Under the plan proposed in the Racing Initiative Measure, which will be Number 6 on the ballot, we believe that racing would soon become one of the most popular sports in the state.

Should the measure be approved by the voters, high class racing, with the best horses taking part, will be restored in a commonwealth once noted for the production of the fastest thoroughbreds in the world. And the pari mutuel system would prevent extravagant wagering, while giving the admirers of their favorite thoroughbreds the opportunity to back their judgment without endangering their financial or moral standing.

It is evident that if the advocates of clean sport turn out on election day and express their honest opinion of the measure, the Racing Initiative Measure—No. 6—will carry by a handsome majority.

PROTESTS DELAY INCORPORATION OF BERESFORD

Petition for the incorporation of Beresford and part of the Homestead district was continued until November 15 last Monday by the San Mateo county board of supervisors. The date set for the hearing of the petition is eleven days after the date of the Homestead annexation election called by San Mateo, which is November 4.

The board's decision was made following a heated argument between sponsors of the incorporation, led by Attorney J. J. Bullock and anti-incorporationists, led by Arthur Redington and Charles N. Kirkbride. Bullock presented the incorporation petition.

In making its decision, the board ruled that the San Mateo election for annexation of the Homestead district was advertised previous to the Beresford incorporation. If the move of San Mateo to annex the Homestead is successful, the Beresford incorporation measure will fall through.

Plans and specifications for the paving of Willow road from Bay road to the Dumbarton cut-off were filed by County Surveyor George Kneese. Bids will be opened on November 1.

Applications of Gus Barbieri and M. J. H. Walzberg for positions as state traffic officers were filed. A communication from State Traffic Officer Chester Kriess, who was injured in a recent accident, recommending that Henry Mengels be appointed temporarily in his place was also filed.

Resignation of William Munroe from the advisory board of the Community hospital at Beresford was accepted by the board, although no sueccessor was named.

A communication from the county librarian recommending that the Community Center at Colma be paid $15 a month rent for the housing of a library was approved.

County Surveyor Kneese was ordered to survey the right-of-way of the Ocean Shore railroad and prepare a description of it.

Officer Undergoes Operation

Chester Kreiss, member of the San Mateo county traffic squad, who was injured in an accident recently, has been taken to a San Francisco hospital, where surgeons will operate on his left knee. An even chance of restoring the use of the limb by means of the operation was expressed following an inspection of the injury by physicians.

DALY CITY TAKES PART IN PARADE

It was with mingled feelings of joy and pride that the people of Daly City accepted the invitation to join in the celebration of the sesqui-centennial of the founding of the city by the Golden Gate and of Mission Dolores church. We are proud of our sister city and its marvelous growth in the century and a half of its existence, and that from Mission Dolores has sprung so many churches producing in this community a noble and intelligent band of citizens.

The men of St. Maximus church responded eagerly to the invitation of the Reverend Archbishop, and on last Sunday to the number of seventy-five marched proudly to the martial music furnished by the Eagles' drum corps, an organization famous throughout the nation.

The celebration, which was partially civic and partially religious, was a magnificent affair. The Daly City unit was composed of the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, which recently won the first prize in a competitive drill at Sacramento; the Eagles' drum corps and St. Maximus men carrying the beautiful new banner belonging to the parish, and they elicited most favorable applause all along the line for their numbers and their fine appearance.

Daly City may well be proud of her representatives in the line of march.

BUILDING PERMITS

The following building permits, issued during the past week, are reported by City Clerk B. C. Ross:

J. Annastassion, 113 Winchester street, five rooms and garage.

Joe Melano, 398 Templeton avenue, garage; 449 Bellevue avenue, alterations.

Duerner Bros., 184 Winchester street, five rooms and garage.

SHOTGUN SQUADS SEARCH HIGHWAYS FOR BANDITS

The wanton killers of five San Francisco men and the wounding of five others during an orgy of slugging, robbing and killing in San Francisco are still at large, while more than 2,000 police officers are combing every nook and corner in seach for the bandits. Chief of Police Doyle and Constable Landini are guarding the Mission street entrance to San Francisco, and keeping a sharp lookout for the bandits.

STORY OF A MAN IDEAL, AMBITION AND REALIZATION

Do you remember when the corner of Los Olivos avenue and Mission street was graced by a motion picture house which was erected to cater to the population of twenty years ago in Daly City?

Do you remember the modest little bakery which occupied the building a couple of doors from it?

Just three years ago, the baker whom we have all grown to familiarly call "Bill," started that little business, at first alone. Then, as trade grew, employing one other man, and between the two of them they took care of the baking, the selling, and in fact the whole thing. Bill's payroll, at that time, didn't need an express wagon to haul it to the store Saturday nights. It totaled the magnificent sum of $115 monthly. But now—

Three years have gone by, and what have we on that corner today? Bill knew the value of the neighborhood buyer. He had the vision of Daly City of the future. So he took the plunge, and invested in the—by this time—defunct movie property, and, at considerable expense, remodeled the building into a modern spacious, sanitary bakery and delicatessen; a place to take the eye of those passing through Daly City on their way down the peninsula; a place whose window display suggests all sorts of delectable things to take home, to all and sundry who get off the car. The best argument that can be made for Bill and his wares is a remark made by a woman boarding the car in San Francisco: "Oh, I'm not going to load myself down with packages here. I can get it just as fresh and just as cheap at the Relish when I get home."

Bill is the kind of business man we want in this district; always cordial, always progressive, and always ready to boost things; and the result is that Daly City as a whole stands behind him to the extent that the payroll of "The Relish," instead of $115, is now $2,000 per month, and still going up.

The participants of this prosperity are assisted in every way to render to the public the highest type of service possible by salesmanship lessons at the expense of the proprietor, who is worthy of all the support that Daly City can give him.

He is about to make improvements costing in the neighborhood of $5,000 in the actual baking department, which will bring this store up to equality with the finest of down town places.

The progress of this one man, who had faith, in such a short time, serves to show what can be accomplished when a person HAS the goods, and DELIVERS 'EM!

GOVERNOR CALLS SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE

Hurried preparations are being made at Sacramento for the one-day session of the legislature, called by Governor Richardson late Tuesday, for ratification of the six-state Colorado river compact.

The governor fixed the special session to begin at 10 o'clock a. m., October 22, leaving but nine days for busy assemblymen and senators to adjust their business affairs and get to the capitol. It will be the first special session since November, 1919, when a one-day meeting ratified the woman's suffrage amendement.

State officers, and even persons close to the governor, were surprised by the call.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR WIDENING OF COLMA ROAD

It won't be long now until the Colma "bottleneck" is a thing of the past—and motorists will rejoice at the opening of a highway through the cemeteries section that will be wide enough to permit of motoring in comfort and safety.

Grading work on the widening of the Colma "bottleneck" will start within a few days, it was made known following the announcement that contracts for the work had been awarded to the Kaiser Paving Company of Oakland.

The Kaiser Paving Company's bid for the work was for the sum of $99,299, almost $19,000 under the estimates of the State Highway Commission's engineers. Work on the grading will be completed in less than four months, according to H. J. Kaiser, head of the company.

The contract covers a stretch of about a mile and a half of road, this lying between Mission street in Colma and the highway junction at Cypress Lawn cemetery. Twenty-five buildings will have to be removed in the work of widening the highway.

Excavation and grading work will be done to prepare for the paving of two 40-foot roadways, one on each side of the 28-foot strip on which the Market Street Railway cars will run. Two eight-foot sidewalks will be provided. Paving of the new highway is not included in the contract with the Kaiser Paving Company.

A campaign that lasted for three years for the breaking of the "bottleneck" came to an end with the awarding of the contract to the Kaiser Company.

With the completion of the work, the "bottleneck—scene of many accidents and many deaths, because of its narrowness—will be no more, and in its place will be substituted two one-way roadways.

The people of this section have just cause to rejoice over the successful conclusion of the "break the bottleneck" campaign.

RETURNS FROM FIVE MONTHS' TRIP ABROAD

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Archer returned last Wednesday from a five months trip to England and Scotland, being accompanied on the trip by three of their children, Evelyn, Viola and Thomas Rowett.

Mr. and Mrs. Archer formely lived in Stamford, England, which was Mr. Archer's birthplace. Mrs. Archer was born in Bambury, famous for the nursery rhyme, "Bambury Cross."

While in England and Scotland they traveled over 7,000 miles by motor visiting all the cathedrals and places of interest, including Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's birthplace, and Sulgrave Manor, the birthplace of the father of George Washington. The American flag was flying over Sulgrave Manor, which was a most pleasing site to our Daly City visitors. Sulgrave Manor has been taken over by an American syndicate and maintained by the subscriptions of the American visitors, of which there is an abundance at all places of interest in that country.

Mr. Archer, who is the owner of the County Line Service Station, declares that the trip was the event of his life, but he is glad to again be back in Daly City, and the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Archer in this community are more than pleased to have them home again.

RACING MEASURE SHOULD TRIUMPH

Number Six, the initiative measure providing for horse racing for limited periods with the pari mutuel method of wagering, is attracting wide attention throughout the state, and political prophets of long experience have no hesitancy in predicting its triumph.

It is more than fifteen years since California had racing on a large scale and the people are very eager for the opportunity to see the thoroughbreds struggling out on the oval once more. It is no exaggeration to say they are right on the qui vive for the revival of the sport and can hardly wait for the opening of the gates at Tanforan, where the first meeting will be held, in the event of Number Six "going over."

"Sam" Hildreth's King James won the last Burns Handicap at Emeryville, and in the seasons prior to the victory of the Plaudit horse such noted performers as Claude, Dainty, Shot Gun, Proper, Old England, San Nicolas, Kenilworth, Yellow Tail, Advance Guard, Waring, Lucrezia Borgia and many others were seen under the saddle on the San Francisco bay region courses, bringing racing enthusiasts from every part of the United States.

Racing was a big drawing card for the state in the days gone by, and the men of affairs who have been instrumental in the submission of Number Six to the electors are confident it will be just as popular when brought back in all its glory.

Tanforan was the scene of the victory of the well remembered Waring in the San Francisco Handicap. Waring was owned by Hildreth, and although the trainer has handled Zev, Purchase, Grey Lag and other fleet performers in later years, he still maintains that Waring was good enough to class with the more modern racers.

If the racing measure goes through the first meeting under the new order of things probably will be held at Tanforan in the early spring with a session to follow at Los Angeles.

TELEPHONES AND MODERN HIGHWAYS HELP FIREMEN

Protection against fire in the state of Delaware depends largely on two essentials of civilization—good roads and the telephone system. Local fire companies are volunteer organizations, who purchase their own equipment, but they are all inter-connected by telephone, and, thanks to a network of concrete roads and the relatively small size of the state, they afford protection in case of fire to the man in the county as well as in the city. But, of course, without the telephone it would be impossible for the farmer to summons aid, however perfect the roads. And without interconnection of telephone between fire companies it might be impossible to reach even the neighboring village's fire engine. The two together, with motorized apparatus, afford protection to every citizen of the state.

REMOVE ADVERTISING SIGNS AT CROSSINGS

Automobile associations and others engaged in the work of averting grade crossing accidents, can do no better than campaign for the prevention of advertising signs at or near railroad crossings.

There should be nothing at or near crossings likely to cause distraction.

When the driver of a vehicle is approaching a crossing, he should have his mind on that very thing, and not be reading signs or thinking of something else.

Signs are likely to attract his attention, and though only for a moment, it is at a time when he should be watching for trains and thinking of nothing else.

It is for the safety of the motor driving public that signs at crossings be removed, other than those required to indicate a railroad crossing, and auto drivers and public authorities should co-operate to effect their elimination.

EXPERT LAUDS WEEKLIES

One of the highest compliments recently paid the weekly newspapers of the United States comes from James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, who declared in a Boston address that "country weeklies are the cornerstone of American journalism."

"The weekly in a small town talks to its readers more intimately and confidentially than any other medium known," Mr. O'Shaughnessy said.

Such a tribute from one of America's leading advertising authorities is gratifying to the thousands of country publishers, many of whom are struggling under adverse conditions to faithfully serve their communities.

It should also impress town and small city merchants with the fact that the weekly newspaper offers the most effective medium for placing his store message before the people upon whom he must depend for his business existence.

URGE PASSAGE OF AMENDMENT TWO

For the first time in its history, the State Board of Equalization, the government body charged with the equalization of state taxes, has gone on record as publicly recommending to the voters of the state that they support a ballot proposition submitted to them.

The board, in regular session, has adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, that this board approves, endorses and recommends the adoption of Constitutional Amendment No. 2 on the ballot for the general election on November 2, 1926, relating to the taxation of highway transportation companies."

The reasons given by the members of the board for their expression were that the amendment, besides establishing a just and fair basis for the taxation of stage companies, provides a new source of revenue for the maintenance and repair of state and county highways.

R. E. Collins, chairman of the board, said:

"The question of taxation for the automobile stages has been in controversy ever since the operation of stages began to develop in this state as a regular industry.

"It has been before every session of the legislature for years, and has resulted in much litigation in the courts that has not even yet reached a final determination.

"This amendement, proposed to the people by the legislature, would establish a definite and equitable system of taxation for stage lines, such as now applies to the other public utilities. It will insure to the state and counties a considerable revenue that can be devoted only to highway purposes, and it will also serve as a guarantee against unjust taxation to the large investments involved in the stage business, which extends to every portion of the state.

"On the other hand, the public is guaranteed protection by the provision of the amendment which will allow future legislatures to change the rate of taxation when that becomes advisable.

"The amendment, as presented to the people, will end the confusion over this issue above referred to. Its terms represent the result of consideration given by the legislatures to the views of all interests concerned in the taxation of commercial users of the highways.

"It is the unanimous judgment of this board, and so far as I have been able to learn, the judgment of all interested groups, that the amendement should be given an affirmative vote by the people of the state on November 2."

ONE LIGHTED LAMP MENACE TO MOTORIST

The menace of one lighted headlamp on a motor vehicle was shown in reports of accidents made following the first rain of the season, according to information given out by the division of motor vehicles. Numerous accidents were reported to the department with one headlight burning having been assigned as the cause. Many owners of motor vehicles pay little or no attention to their headlighting equipment, according to Will H. Marsh, chief of the division of motor vehicles, and as a result in many cases do not realize that one light is not burning. Others are just naturally careless and although they may know they are operating their vehicles with one headlight burning in violation of the law, yet they are too careless and negligent to re-equip and replace the burned out bulb with a new one.

Those guilty of carelessness and negligence in this matter are going to have cause for regret when a bulletin which was sent out from the Sacramento office becomes effective. The bulletin provides that arrests shall be made of drivers of vehicles being operated with one lighted headlamp. This bulletin is being addressed to all division inspectors and traffic captains, and one night each week will be devoted to this particular infraction, which, officials assert, is becoming entirely too numerous.

AN UNPARALLELED TELEPHONE SERVICE

While the United States telephone subscribers can get direct connection with any one of the 16,500,000 telephones scattered over the North American continent and the Island of Cuba, in Europe it is estimated that only from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 of its 7,000,0000 telephones are interconnected in such a way as to make conversation possible between any two of them.

The number of telephones in any of the remaining continents is very small in comparison with the showing of North America, and they are divided among isolated systems to such an extent that inter-connection is still more limited.

Only the uniform instruments and uniform practices, as adopted by American telephone companies, could give a universal service such as we enjoy.

SIDELIGHTS

By Marcy B. Darnall

General Andrews recently told newspaper men that he insists that all prohibition enforcement officers be total abstainers, but added, rather paradoxically: "The only ones who have to drink are the poor devils who must buy it in getting evidence. I think it's a shame that they have to do it." Few have resigned, however on account of this hardship.

C. F. Sessinger, a bonding company official, declares that "90 per cent of the people of this country are potential crooks." Meaning, it is assumed, that nine out of ten people would steal if the reward were large enough and the chances sufficiently favorable for getting away with it. Of course, most of us like to think that we belong among the trustworthy 10 per cent.

Thomas A. Edison, who sleeps little, admits that if his age were figured by the hours he has worked he would be about 120 years old. He says he has worked two shifts a day most of his life, and adds: "Lots of other men work two shifts a day too, but devote one to playing poker."

Bandits in Detroit recently showed determination worthy of a better calling. They attempted to hold up one bank, but were routed with a spray of tear gas released when the cashier pressed a button. They proceeded to another six blocks away, where they had better luck, securing $3,000 and making good their escape.

E. D. Smith sped along the highway near Sacramento, followed closely by a motorcycle policeman, when a loud report rang out. Slowing down Smith begged, "Don't shoot again, officer, I'll give up." The policeman said, "I didn't shoot; that was your tire that blew out." Smith collapsed and an investigation disclosed that he was wanted in Stockton for stealing the car. Conscience plus imagination had been his undoing.

Some reflections concerning the value of a man's life are provoked by the decision of the mixed claims commission in settlement of claims growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania. It sought to allow only for the value of a victim's life to those dependent upon him, therefore it awarded $10,000 to the heirs of a mechanic, but nothing to those of Alfred Vanderbilt.

Allen Roesch of Philadelphia probably will never try to swim the English channel. He swam a quarter of a mile off a New Jersey beach and had to call for help. After his rescue he was arrested for "violating the law of common sense by venturing so far."

Women of Custrin, Belgium, are justly indignant because of an invasion of their rights to talk. Some busybody has dug up an old law of the Middle Ages which enables husbands to have their wives sent to jail for gossiping. A press dispatch indicates that a good many husbands are getting busy on the strength of the old statute.

Mrs. E. T. Perry, wealthy woman of Atherton, Kansas, invited friends to a wake which lasted four days and nights, during which time she recounted the virtues of the dead to any who would listen. Then the mortal remains of Phil, beloved French poodle, was deposited in an elegant marble mausoleum.

There is something in a name. At least the Damm sisters, Florence, Helen, Margaret, Agnes, Jeannette and Gertrude, convinced a judge at White Plains, New York, that such is the case. After hearing their story of embarrassment caused by ridicule of their family name, the court permitted them to change it from Damm to Gorman.

Occupants of airplanes in collision at an altitude of 4,000 feet would ordinarily be considered poor insurance risks. But Lieutenants Williams and Wiseheart of the Army crashed their planes in mid-air at Honolulu and returned to earth unhurt. Williams landed with a parachute, while Wiseheart stuck to his damaged plane and piloted it to a safe landing.

Springfield, Tennessee, is without a barber, according to the Herald, which states that "Judge Shearhouse has given the town's only barber a steady 15-months position on the county chain gang." This makes a fine opening for a chirontonsor who can keep out of the law's clutches.

In the year 1327 the four French communes of Requebilliere, Belvedere Saint-Martin- Vesubie and Lautosque got into a law suit over 16,000 acres of land. Now the court of appeals at Aix has ordered that the land be divided among the four communes. An apparently reasonable decision even though it did take 600 years to get around to it.

Children may be interested to know that Santa Claus recently got married. John Gluck of Bradley Beach N. J., president of the Santa Claus Association, receives all mail addressed to Santa Claus, by order of the Post Office Department. He is 47, and his bride was Miss Gertrude Avery, a Canadian nurse, aged 27.

Captains of industry and business continue to devote immense sums to charitable and cultural purposes. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, former head of a great mail order house, who has already given away many millions, recently donated $3,000,000 toward a proposed industrial museum in his home city.

Mrs. Einstein says that Albert has never explained his theory of relativity to her, but adds that she isn't complaining.

"Talk Is Cheap!"

"TALK is cheap—but it takes money to buy a farm!" Many a schoolyard argument of boyhood days has been ended with this homely bit of philosophy.

For the American telephone user, talk is truly cheap—cheaper than anywhere else in the world. But it takes money to keep his telephone service cheap and to make it ever and ever cheaper. The Bell System is devoting millions of dollars to research in order to discover economies that will partially offset the rising costs of labor and materials. It is spending nearly three-quarters of a million dollars a day for new plant, every dollar of which extends the scope of every telephone and makes every subscriber's service more valuable.

The savings of telephone users, invested in telephone securities, have helped to make the Bell System's nation-wide service the most economical, as well as the most efficient and most extensive, telephone service in the world.

James Ford Rhodes, the famous historian, said at a dinner in Boston:

"In studying great men's lives you are amazed at the abuse their contemporaries heap on their best work. Wagner is an example. The finer the masterpiece Wagner turned out, the viler the ridicule that would be visited on him. Jealousy? No, stupidity."

Doctor Rhodes smiled and ended in his epigrammatic way:

MAHALIA'S KITCHEN

Now little Mahalia was very fond of cooking and she was very clever at cooking, too. She could make most delicious things to eat and the more she tried the better she became.

She Knew How.

In fact, she had good luck, so she said. But it was really because she was so clever at doing it.

Her little next-door friend used to make most awful mistakes and then say she had no luck.

She would put something in the oven and forget all about it, and what could the oven do but go on roasting when it had been all started off to roast?

Now one day as a great treat Mahalia was allowed to get the whole dinner. She even was allowed to plan what they would have to eat.

First of all she decided they would have tomato soup made with tomatoes and milk. Oh, she knew how to keep them separate until just the right time and how to mix them and how the soda kept the milk from curdling.

Then she decided she would have popovers, as her family loved popovers and her popovers always turned out well.

She thought she would be very economical and use some of the steak that had been left over from dinner the day before.

So she put it in the meat chopper and added some potatoes that had also been left over and made a very nice little hash.

"They will want something very cool and crisp to go with hash," Mahalia said to herself.

So she fixed some celery in a dish.

To go with the hash she had some spinach, as it was nice and green.

Now that was just about as much as she could possibly manage, so for dessert she had some preserved fruit and some cookies from the cookie jar.

Her mother had made the cookies. But they would all think it was fine that she was preparing so much, and the popovers would be her special dish of the evening.

Mahalia had her kitchen all in such perfect order. Long before the spinach was started being cooked it was in a big bowl on the table soaking in cold water. And the celery had been wrapped up in a wet cloth and had been upon the ice where it could keep so crisp and nice.

Then all her spoons and forks and knives that she would use were put in readiness so she would not have to go hunting for them. She knew that to have things ready kept the food from ever burning.

In a Big Bowl.

She greased her popover tins in plenty of time, and she set the table, too.

She did it all so carefully and neatly that it was not nearly the fuss and bother as if she had gone rushing about her kitchen, forgetting this, suddenly remembering that, smelling something burning, having to waste without any reason save because of carelessness.

No, she didn't do it in any careless way, but so neatly and nicely and capably and cleverly.

And quite often, because Mahalia was so good at cooking and fixing things to eat and in looking after household matters that the family spoke of the kitchen as "Mahalia's kitchen."

It was a compliment she more than deserved.

Voice of World War Veterans Potent in Policy of Nation's Protection

By HANFORD MAC NIDER, Assistant Secretary of War.

THE American Legion has fought its way to recognition as the voice of the great war veterans, overcoming "indifference, misunderstanding—even organized opposition.

As our generation becomes the active generation in American affairs, so will the legion become the dominant voice concerning all those things on which experience qualifies it to speak.

On all questions of proper national defense, the voice of the generation which fought the war will be final. Only the men who fought have the necessary background to speak authoritatively. It is logical to presume that the nation will be glad to take advantage of their experience and abide by their advice.

They know what war is and they have no desire to see it again. They do not want it for themselves and certainly they do not want it for their sons. Men who have seen their comrades maimed and killed about them know what sacrifices have been made to preserve American citizenship. They have no intention of allowing that hard-won heritage to be dissipated or left at the mercy of a still unsettled world.

Person Who Neglects to Vote Deficient in Full Duty to the Community

By MACKENZIE KING, Ex-Premier of Canada.

It is necessary to direct attention to the false and foolishly false remark so frequently made by a voter that his vote is only "one" and that in consequence his ballot among an avalanche of others is of little or no importance.

This misconception of a public duty has had disastrous results in unnumbered elections.

It is obvious that an "avalanche" of ballots is merely an accumulation of single ballots, and that if everyone were fool enough to come to the conclusion that his particular vote could have no material influence, the election system would break down.

In very many elections just about one-half of the possible vote is polled. And curiously enough it is just this indolent non-voting class which protests the loudest and most piteously when the government goes awry, and when the tax collector bores deeper than ever into its pockets.

Burdensome taxation, inefficient government, and indifferent voters go hand in hand. This fact cannot be borne too deeply in mind by the man with the ballot.

Diet Based on Cereal Food Called Fundamental Error of the Present Day

By DR. E. B. FORBES, Pennsylvania State College.

The greatest error man ever made was that of basing his diet on cereal food. Having first learned to cook his food, man softened its composition to the detriment of his physical welfare, a train of physical ills following the decayed teeth that cooked food caused.

Man heaped insult on injury when he screened out the fine white flour from the grain, leaving the best parts for his farm animals, and the climax of tragic comedy came when he learned to make chemically pure sugar containing no essential nutrient and to eat this on his refined cereal foods. The results are the deficiency diseases, which were termed the great qualitative food problem of civilization.

More acute, however, than that problem, is the one arising from the constantly increasing population of the world. Three ways of solving the problem are possible: Starvation, warfare, or the attainment of an equilibrium between births and deaths at a population level allowing adequately for variation in food production.

Sickness Now Costing the United States Over Two Billion Dollars a Year

By LOUIS I. DUBLIN, Insurance Statistician.

Sickness costs the people of the United States more than $2,000,000,000 a year in lost wages and medical bills, and premature death a sum equally large.

Less than 50 cents per capita, or about $60,000,000, is expended each year on public health work, only a part of which amount is directed to the prevention of disease. This is altogether inadequate.

Expert opinion is that an expenditure of $2 per capita wisely directed against the preventable diseases and for health education would reduce the annual death rate two points per 1,000 and correspondingly increase the expectation of life possible five full years. The value of an added year of life is estimated at $1,000 at least. The addition of five years to the length of life of the 117,000,000 Americans would add $600,000,000,000 to the value of living capital of the United States

Philosophy of Education, With Philosophy of Life, Essential to Teacher

By DR. ELMER B. BRYAN, President Ohio University.

A philosophy of education commensurate with a philosophy of life is essential to the profession of teaching. We must have an attitude toward life. We must believe certain things and realize that we are making contributions to life.

It is the business of the school to help the younger generation to run up and come abreast of the race. No other institution has been founded with the avowed purpose of helping the young to catch up.

The track of humanity runs upward, slow and difficult though it is. The world is better today than it has ever been before, and, though we look through the keyhole and the wheels seem to run backward, the wagon is still moving on across town.

Women Who Refuse to Tell Age, and So Lose Vote, Make Grievous Error

By MISS BELLE SHERWIN, President Women Voters' League.

Women who refuse to vote because they have to disclose their age are out of date and handicap women's political progress. A woman's age, no matter what it may be, is not a thing to conceal or to be ashamed of unless, indeed, it proves that with years she has not gained understanding. The refusal of women, on such ground, to take part in the choice of men and women who are to conduct the government is as antiquated as many customs now discarded which for centuries bound women within a narrow sphere of activity.

The voting power is a serious one. It should not be impaired by trifling.

THE INITIATIVE GAS TAX

Among the measures to be submitted to the people of California on November 2 is the initiative measure sanctioning an increase of one cent on the present gasoline tax.

The completion of the state highway system is admittedly the one big job confronting the people of this state. It is not a new problem. It arrived some fifteen or sixteen years ago, after the state had voted the first highway bond issue and had definitely committed itself to the construction of a state system of fine roads. The crux of the whole matter is money. Given sufficient money, the State Highway Commission can and will do the rest in whatever period of time the people fix.

Under the proposal of the one-cent gasoline tax measure—Proposition 4 on the November ballot—that period of time is fixed at twelve years—at the outside fourteen years. The money needed is about $220,000,000. Some of this money is already in sight. Federal funds will help some, and fees from other sources will provide some more. But the main cost must be defrayed by some new form of taxation, or else more bonds. And more bonds are out of the question. The people don't want them and won't vote them. Then what other source for taxation can be found that will not interfere with the other state requirements? There is none now recognized other than the gasoline tax method. The method is now providing funds for maintenance and reconstruction. By simply increasing the tax from the present two cents per gallon to three cents, an increase of one cent a gallon, all the funds needed will be provided.

The thinking voter, who wants to see our splendid system of state highway completed, and the existing state and local taxes undisturbed, will approve of Proposition 4. It solves the highway financing problem in a way that hurts no one, and gives justice to all.

Distributed among the more than a million automobile owners of the state, the extra tax of one cent on each gallon of gasoline used will not be felt, and the roads will be built from this one cent fund on a "pay-as-you-go" basis—a far better plan than that of voting big bond issues to paid in the future.

FINANCIAL AID FOR VETERANS

American Legion officials who are sponsoring the $20,000,000 Farm and Home Veterans' Loan Act on the November ballot expect to get over their message to the voters of California between now and election day.

Proposition No. 1 on the ballot provides for the use of state credit in the issuance of bonds for the continuation of the purchase of farms and homes for the veterans without cost to the taxpayers of California.

It is estimated that, in addition to the 2,500 veterans who will be aided through the first bond act, passed in 1922, over 5,000 more will be provided for in the new bond act. The Veterans' Welfare Board has approved approximately 6,000 applications and given veteran certificate holders the opportunity to select and apply for suitable property.

The $20,000,000 bond issue will be sufficient, in the next three or four years, to take care of all the worthy California veterans who have a sincere desire to acquire a farm through state aid, it is claimed.

The bond issue will not cost the taxpayers a penny, because of the fact that the bonds bear 4½ per cent interest while the veterans repay the state 5 per cent to take care of all the administrative expense.

REAL MERCHANTS

All the real big merchants in the United States are not located in the big cities. A recent survey of big stores in small towns disclosed some surprising facts, a few of which are quoted:

Garver Brothers' store in Strasburg, Ohio, 1,000 population, does an annual business of a million dollars. The Outlaw concern at Winner, South Dakota, 3,000 population, sells $850,000 worth of goods a year. A department store at Lynden, Washington, with 1,250 people, does $750,000 yearly. The B. & O. Cash Store at Temple, Oklahoma, with barely 1,000 people, does $735,000 annually. Fred Mann's store at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, sells $500,000 worth of merchandise a year.

How do they do it?

They do it through the same business policies and methods that have won success for retailers in the largest cities of America. They keep good stocks, give their customers real service, and they ADVERTISE consistently, persistently and adequately in their local newspapers.

HISTORICAL FILMS

Citizens of the future will see history enacted, as well as read about it, if a plan proposed by Will H. Hays, head of the moving picture industry, is put into effect.

He suggests that space be provided in the new Archives Building to be built in Washington for the storage of many thousands of moving pictures of events which will have a permanent historical interest.

Many such films are now being preserved in various vaults throughout the country, beginning with the inauguration of President McKinley, and including pictures made during the World war.

With proper care, negatives as now made will last for many years, and duplicates may be made from time to time when originals have begun to show signs of deterioration. Attempts are being made to develop a process whereby the life of films may be prolonged indefinitely.

Think what it will mean to posterity to be able to witness on the screen historical events exactly as they were enacted centuries before.

ADVERTISING NEEDS NO DEFENSE

Arthur Brisbane, in his column "Today," says: "H. G. Wells defends advertising, which doesn't need defense, saying that the twelve apostles were 'drummers' advertising salvation, and St. Paul raising his voice at Athens was an advertiser, before printing presses and big type made advertising efficient.

"You may go still further back. The rainbow was the first large sized color advertisement, guaranteeing that the earth would not be drowned again by flood.

"Caesar, writing on the walls of Rome the proceedings of the senate, prepared the first political advertisement.

"The great Asiatic king who wrote on his tomb, 'I am Cyrus, O Man,' etc., prepared an excellent personal advertisement.

"To advertise means to INFORM, and information is life."

STOP AT GRADE CROSSINGS

Hanford, California, has passed an ordinance requiring that all automibiles make a complete stop before crossing railroad tracks. Commenting on the measure, R. J. Clancy official in charge of safety for the Southern Pacific Company, says:

"It is the belief that requiring drivers to stop will result in looking in both directions, which will safeguard against accident if a train is approaching. It is the further belief that when required to stop, drivers will not approach crossings at a speed so high that they can not stop before running into a train, a condition existing in more than one-fifth of all grade crossing accidents.

"In the last eight years, ended December 31, 1925, 1,678 automobiles struck trains of the Southern Pacific instead of being struck by train, and 197 skidded into train, resulting from approaching the track at a speed above braking power of the machine."

It takes 1,650 nuts to hold an automobile together, but one nut can smash it to pieces.

It is said there isn't a man in Pittsburg who is successful in holding a white colar job.

"I will drive " said his wife, as she climbed into the back seat.

The heads of the various committees preparing for the big cabaret dance to be held October 23 reported excellent progress, and many tickets have been sold. The entertainers are busy rehearsing their acts, and all is going fine to make this the peppiest and most enjoyable affair of all. A fine jazz orchestra has been engaged to render the latest music.

Back of this Service

In the public utility business it is necessary to raise new capital for additional plant facilities.

Power plants, gas works are not built from earnings—that is, from money paid for service rendered.

New money must be obtained through the sale of securities such as stocks and bonds. Having a good credit rating has had much to do with the success of this Company in the sale of securities.

The Company initiated the customer ownership plan and was the first in the United States to put it into practice.

FASE CLAMOR OF EVIL OF RACING

While it was to be expected that the effort to restore racing in California would meet with opposition, all reports from the Coast about the progress of the fight for restoration of the sport are promising indeed.

In every community there are always found those who are prone to say "don't," not only to racing, but to every other amusement of red-blooded men and women. California is no exception, and already there have appeared vicious attacks on racing by the misinformed. They are attacks that are just as unwarranted and as far from the truth as has been usual in all the crusades against the sport and they will do no harm in the minds of the thinking citizens, but it behooves the champions of the sport to be more alert than ever before to combat the slanders that have been heaped on the greatest of all sports.

At this time these attacks that seek to defeat the passage of a law to restore racing are false to the best intrests of their state, just as their slanders against the sport are false and born both of ignorance and malice. There are those who attack racing that undoubtedly know something of the sport. Their attacks are born of malice and those who know nothing of the benefits and the glories of racing as a sport oppose it just as they supported the eighteenth amendment, opposed a boxing bill, fought against Sunday baseball and Sunday amusements generally, while they considered it a sacred duty to labor diligently for all the hypocritical blue laws that for the most part have only bred law-breakers and made the "land of the free and the home of the brave" an empty boast rather than an actuality.

And they are false to the best interests of the state in robbing California of one of its greatest attractions. Californians know to their sorrow that racing, more than any other one thing, was an attraction that diverted much of the winter travel to Florida. The Miami Jockey Club gave the pleasure-seekers what they wanted and then Florida, when it became known to those wealthy visitors, had other charms to hold them. California has everything to offer except the racing, but racing swung the balance to Florida, and when racing is opposed by any set of Californians they are false to the best interests of the state.

Any thinking man cannot be carried away by the false clamor of the evil of racing when, if he will stop and take time to inquire into the charges against the sport, he will at once realize the great benefits to come to the state by racing.

The law that seeks to bring the sport back will mean a direct revenue to the state through taxation, but the revenue in the wealth that is attracted by the sport is infinitely greater, and any loyal citizen of the state, who has its best interests at heart, whether they be financial or moral interests, should cast his vote for racing in November.—From the Daily Racing Form of October 6.

BELIEVE IN SIGNS? HERE'S A GOOD ONE

Do you believe in signs? Here is one that augurs well for all Californians—the campaign sign that the All-California Highways campaign committee has originated for the purpose of boosting the one-cent gas tax measure on the November ballot.

The campaign symbol is called "A Good Road Sign" because that is what Proposition 4, the gas tax measure, means to the million and one-half of California motorists who use the state highways—when and where they are in good condition.

Proposition 4 means good roads, the completion of the entire state highway system in the next twelve years. To bring that about, all the motorist voter has to do is to stamp his ballot in favor of the gas tax—one-cent per gallon, or about $5 per motorist per year!

In creating this "Good Road Sign" the artist used his head as well as his talented pen. He took advantage of the fact that the gas tax measure was given fourth place on the ballot, and will have the numeral "4" as its identifying mark. And of course the numeral "4" when spoken has the same sound as "for," and that it really means to vote FOR the gas tax, if one wants to understand it that way. Anyway, the artist so understood it, and he cleverly worked it out that way on the campaign symbol.

"Give me neither poverty nor riches," said the sage. But if it must be one or the other, let it be riches.

BEAUTY AND UTILITY

Beauty in architecture in the past has been associated principally with government buildings, cathedrals, memorial structures and other edifices in the erection of which sentiment has played a part.

But in recent years a noticeable trend toward beauty of design has been seen in the construction of buildings devoted to purely business purposes.

With a view to illustrating this trend, the London Daily Express some months ago undertook to find some outstanding examples of beautiful public utility buildings. After a world wide search, it selected three as preeminent in their class.

It may be surprising to many to know that one of these was found in Alabama—the new home of the Alabama Power Company in Birmingham. The other two are the Saint Gothard railway building in Switzerland, and the Lots-Road railroad station in Chelsea, England.

Pictures of these three buildings were recently printed in the Daily Express, which has a circulation of more than a million, and it was a high tribute to an American business concern to have its building selected as one of the three most beautiful structures in the whole world devoted to public utility purposes.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The critical water situation in North San Juan, Nevada county, and at French Corral and other places along the ridge was relieved recently by a flow of water from French Lake one of the Bowman group. Repair of flumes damaged by forest fires has been sufficient to permit turning down 100 inches of water. The reservoirs at both towns are dry and the uncertain water supply of a few wells has been all of the water available for domestic use for several days. So acute has grown the situation that use of well water for automobile radiators and watering poultry was banned, such supplies being obtained from the Yuba river, several miles distant.

Robert G. Sproul, controller and vice-president of the University of California, issued a statement in support of proposition No. 10 on the November ballot, which provides for a bond issue of $8,500,000 for state buildings in Sacramento and Los Angeles and university buildings in Berkeley and Los Angeles. Sproul, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign for the measure, declared that approval of the bond issue will not increase taxes, either directly or indirectly. He says it will designate how corporation taxes, already provided for, are to be spent.

Ground will be dedicated and the cornerstone laid at San Francisco for San Francisco's War Memorial buildings, on Armistice Day, November 11, under the auspices of officials of the War Memorial Commission board of trustees, boards of the San Francisco Opera and Symphony organizations, American Legion and various veterans and military organizations. Civic and state officials will take an active part in the ceremonies, and units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will co-operate with the local committee of arrangements in the elaborate exercises.

The dangerous little "divorce imp," which lures an average of 10,000 California couples to the marital rocks each year, will be made a subject of state investigation if the legislature passes a measure which Senator J. M. Inman of Sacramento, plans to introduce this winter. Inman's bill will provide that the statistical branch of the state board of health gather all data bearing on divorces, including the annual number of decrees granted by California courts and the number of children affected by the separations.

Frank Pettibone of Long Beach, was in Bakersfield recently, on his way home from his mine in the Sierras, near Visalia, in an effort to enter into a contract with an aviation company to carry ore from his mine to the nearest railway shipping point. The ore, which is used in lightening steel, is valued at $800 a ton, he said. Only by the use of airplanes, equipped to carry heavy cargoes, can the mine be made to yield a profit, its owner says, as it is not accessible to mules or other means of transportation.

Three thousand Coulter pines will be set out along the roads of Santa Barbara county this winter and the coming spring. The young trees are to come from the Los Angeles county forestry department, and a general reforestation program will be launched this fall. Berry bearing vines and shrubs will be tried out within the forest lands to develop sources of food for wild birds, and a protective association has been formed to stock these regions with wild turkeys, pheasants and grouse.

Anderson Valley, Mendocino county, nestling under protecting hills which, while providing just enough coolness to properly retain moisture in the fruit, never allows blistering, and which section produces some of the finest apples in California, is going to hold its first Annual Apple Show and Fair next month. Every farm center in Mendocino county is to have an exhibit at the fair and an attendance of 5,000 is looked forward to.

In spite of the fact that 726 cases of measles have been reported in California for the past month as compared with 50 during the same period in 1925, officials of the state board of health, declared the situation was not alarming. Most of the cases are in the coast counties from San Luis Obispo north to San Francisco.

Theodore Chapman Fox, Civil War veteran, who died at the Yountville veterans home, on September 21, was revealed as a hero of the great Chicago fire of 1871. In that conflagration, he risked his life many times carrying persons to safety from the flames and afterwards was highly lauded for his brave deeds.

John S. Taylor, 98, Santa Rosa, has been in Nevada City looking up the familiar scenes of 76 years ago, when he was in the gold diggings and while there celebrated California's first admission day. The pioneer endeavored to locate the grave of his old partner.

Announcement was made a short time ago that plans had been completed for a new Masonic temple to be erected at Redondo Beach. The structure will cost between $50,000 and $100,000, depending upon features of construction under consideration it was pointed out, and will house all lodges of the Masonic order at the beach city.

Orange, situated in the heart of a $7,000,000 Valencia district, thirty-four miles from Los Angeles, has witnessed substantial development along many lines during the past twelve months. While true that no construction records have been established, building operations have been steady without any boom flurries to disturb land values and then subside.

Estimated to contain 31,080 feet of first grade lumber, one of the most perfect sugar pine trees yet cut rolled into the Tuolumne mill of the Pickering Lumber company on nine flat cars. Measuring nine feet in diameter at the butt, the tree was 226 feet tall. The first limb branched out 102 feet from the ground. The tree was cut into twenty foot lengths for hauling in from Camp.

Reports filed by county assessors with the state board of equalization show that the number of California war veterans granted tax exemption greatly increased for the 1926-27 tax year over 1925. Property valued at more than $78,000,000 and owned by 140,790 ex-service men was placed on the exempt roll for 1926 as compared to $69,127,986 in property owned by 120,938 veterans in 1925.

A scientific study of windbreaks is to be conducted in the windy areas of San Bernardino county under the direction of Farm Adviser H. J. Wilder and Woodbridge Metcalf, extension forester of the State College of Agriculture. In order to measure the effect of well developed windbreaks on the velocity of winds within an orange grove that is protected by a "break," an anemometer has been placed in a Fontana grove, where A. B. Miller, developer of that district, has already secured some excellent data. This, it is believed, will be of [illegible] to citrus growers.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

Barbarossa

A GERMAN lad—nearly eight hundred years ago—made Charlemagne his model in life, and resolved to duplicate the French king's feats and win the same power and glory. Like many another historical celebrity, the German youth was red-haired. From this fact his Italian enemies later nicknamed him "Barbarossa" (Red-Beard). His Christian name was Frederick and he was nephew of Conrad, emperor of Germany.

Charlemagne had one early advantage over Barbarossa, for he was direct heir to the throne, while Conrad had a son of his own. Yet so cleverly did the young Barbarossa arrange matters that he, and not this rightful heir, was chosen by Conrad as his successor. The people ratified the choice, and on Conrad's death in 1152 Barbarossa, then twenty-nine years old, came to the throne.

He found Germany in no enviable condition. Disputes had arisen among the petty principalities of the country, and, under Conrad's easy rule, the ties of allegiance had weakened. Moreover, Germany's claims to suzerainty in Italy and other lands had been allowed to lapse. Altogether, Barbarossa had a very poor start in his plan of rivaling Charlemagne's greatness.

In no way discouraged at the gloomy prospect, the young king set to work at once reconciling the differences among the home principalities and making decidedly advantageous alliances and treaties for himself at home and abroad. Unlike most medieval heroes, he was more than a mere warrior. He was also a shrewd politician and an adept in the art of cajoling when coercion failed. In this way he proceeded to strengthen and consolidate Germany into a compact, contented nation. He then made municipal and civic reforms, promoted the cause of education and culture and started Germany once more upon the path of progress.

Having accomplished these tremendous tasks, Barbarossa turned his attention to the Italians who had shaken off Germany's yoke. The Milanese, who ruled much of the northern part of Italy, had maltreated German subjects. Barbarossa, at the head of an army, marched against these rebels, conquered them and laid waste northern Italy. Having thus avenged his subjects' real or fancied wrongs, he marched over the Apennines upon Rome, and there, on June 18, 1155, he was crowned "Holy Roman Emperor." The resemblance to Charlemagne being thus far carried out, he hurried back to Germany, whence tidings had come of robber knights and barons who, taking advantage of their emperor's absence, had set out on a high-handed course of misrule.

Barbarossa wasted little time in crushing these oppressors. He then resumed his plans of conquest. By diplomacy more than by force he won the allegiance of Poland, of Hungary, of Bohemia and the powerful French province of Burgundy. He then went back to Italy and besieged and captured Milan.

The pope, noting this rapid acquisition of power, demanded that Barbarossa become a papal vassal. Barbarossa calmly refused and showed himself able and ready to enforce his refusal. The pope for the time withdrew his demands. But it was soon after this that Barbarossa scandalized Christendom by practically declaring war on the Vatican.

The dispute was purely political and cast no reflection on the emperor's religious faith. Alexander III was pope. Barbarossa favored an anti-pope's claims. Alexander promptly excommunicated him. Barbarossa, in retaliation, stormed Rome and took possession of the Vatican. Italy held its breath at such sacrilege. But even while the world looked on, spellbound, a pestilence swept the German army at Rome (sent, as Alexander declared, in punishment for Barbarossa's blasphemous conduct), and of all that vast host only a scattered remnant returned alive to Germany.

At sight of this weakening of their dreaded master's forces the cities of Lombardy, Italy, formed a confederation against Barbarossa, utterly routing him in battle at Lignano. The emperor was crushed under his falling horse and left on the field for dead. But within three days he reappeared—miraculously, it was thought—at the head of his surviving troops at Pavia.

His plans were defeated, his great power apparently gone. Another man would have despaired. But Barbarossa merely exchanged war once more for diplomacy. He acknowledged Alexander as the true pope and by various crafty maneuvers of wire-pulling and statesmanship regained political control of Italy. Not content with this, he set forth to capture the Holy Land from the Turks. He won two decisive victories in Asia Minor, but before he could reach Palestine itself he was drowned, in 1190, while trying to cross a river—an inglorious death for the hero who had conquered and ruled the greater part of the continent of Europe!

Barbarossa's achievements in behalf of his native land marked a distinct epoch in history. He helped on the cause of the people by granting rights and franchises to cities, and set a world example of model and progressive government. Civilization and the arts throve under his wise reign.

Balk at Retirement

Professors in Germany who are forced onto the pension list at the age of sixty-eight, in compliance with the new federal law in effect there, are protesting bitterly that they are too young to retire. According to this edict all government officials, clerks and employees must retire at the age of sixty-eight at the latest. Many head professors who have reached the age limit feel that they are still able to keep up with their duties as well as ever. Only after considerable protest have they relinquished their administrative posts, even though they receive full pay and continue to give their usual lecture courses.

Perversity

Have you ever had 7:30 roll around and you decide it is about time to get ready for your date and you are tired and sleepy and you wish you could go to bed early at least one evening in the week, and you wonder what made you get the date anyway and you are yawning so wide you can't get your necktie on, and then suddenly the phone rings and the girl breaks the date, and so the whole evening is ruined? Have you ever had that happen? So have I.—Northwestern Purple Parrot.

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties easily and properly!

When Mrs. Wallace was experiencing great difficulty in carrying on the daily tasks, a friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was their faithful ally in the struggle for better health.

Traffic Accidents

In the opinion of the police chiefs of the leading American cities carelessness of drivers, carelessness of pedestrians, lack of standard traffic signals and congestion of traffic are the four principal causes of traffic accidents. Speeding, intoxication, incompetent drivers, glaring headlights, petting parties and physical or mental disability were designated as the next major causes of auto accidents.

The Oldest Grocer

Several months ago there began a country-wide search for the retail grocers of America who have been longest in business. That search has now ended.

Andrew Hawes of Portland, Maine, steps into the lead. He has been active in the retail grocery trade for 74 years. This dean of the Progressive Grocers' Old Timers' club began his career in 1852 as a clerk with his father. Two years later he took active charge of the store. All these years he has been doing business in the same building at the same location. He is believed to be the oldest retail grocer in the country in point of service.

Modern Chivalry

Samuel Wallace was deploring the lack of politeness in the younger generation. "Never again," he said, "will we have the romantic days and the superlative politeness of Sir Walter Raleigh's time.

"I can well imagine a young American laying his coat over a puddle for some flapper to walk on and crying, 'Step on it, kid, step on it.'"

ECHO OF MAXIMILIAN

The death of a remarkable character was chronicled in a press dispatch from Almagordo, New Mexico, a few days ago, when Juan Mena passed away at the age of 109.

Mena's claim to fame did not depend upon his great age alone. He had commanded the firing squad which executed Emperor Maximilian of Mexican, with his generals, Mijelas, Mirabon and Marquez.

Maximilian, archduke of Austria, had accepted the crown offered him by Napoleon III of France and Mexican leaders in 1864, but his reign was beset with difficulties from the beginning. Refusing to abdicate when it would have been policy to have done so, he took refuge in Queretaro, where he sustained a siege for several weeks, finally being captured by the revolutionists. He was tried by courtmartial and shot on June 19, 1867.

Juan Mena, whose duty it became to carry out the emperor's death sentence, was at the time a captain in the revolutionary army, in which Porfirion Diaz, afterwards president, was of the same rank. Mena had lived in the United States for many years prior to his death, and was a highly respected citizen, though he could neither read nor write.

The names connected with Maximilian's execution form a remarkable alliteration: Mexico, Maximilian, Mijelas, Mirabon, Marquez and Mena, the executioner.

OLD TIME RACING IN CALIFORNIA

How One Historic Match Race Led to Another in 1844

By Edward A. Morphy, Editor San Francisco Argonaut

Don Jose Ramon de Carillo, of the Santa Rosa rancho, was one of the best horsemen and keenest sporstmen in California eighty or ninety years ago. His mother owned the country upon which the city of Santa Rosa now stands, where she had some three thousand head of cattle and about fifteen hundred horses.

This was an unusually large proportion of horses; but Don Ramon was passionately fond of horses, and never seemed happy unless he was on horseback. His pet diversion was lassoing bears, and of course he could ride a race against anybody.

His memory is interesting on this account, because he was the first Don of whom we have any record that rode a race against an Englishman in San Francisco.

In 1844 Don Jose Ramon was a man of 21, and was a great friend and comrade of Captain William Heath Davis, who had come to California from Boston as a boy of 10 in 1831, and was three years older than Carillo.

Davis wanted a couple of horses for his own use just then and he bought them from Carillo.

One of these was a beautiful dappled grey, for which he paid $20. The other was a very dark buckskin or palomino, a peculiarly handsome and speedy animal. For this one he paid $50. Fifty dollars was then a high price for a horse in California; but either of these horses would have been worth $200 in California forty years later.

At that time, Captain Don Francisco Sanchez, (the same Sanchez that was commandant at San Francisco three years later when the Americans hoisted the Stars and Stripes on the Plaza) owned another and more famous buckskin that was named for its color, Palomino.

Don Jose Ramon challenged Sanchez to race Palomino against Davis' buckskin, and the gallant Captain accepted the challenge. The race was over a course of three hundred yards on the usual race track—the roadway adjacent to the Mission Dolores—and everybody in the then diminutive settlement of Yerba Buena gathered to the contest, as did the Dons and their friends from as far north as Santa Rosa and as far south as San Jose.

Captain Sanchez owned the San Pedro ranch in San Mateo county, so everybody from that section gathered at the race. Don Jose Ramon was, if anything, a better rider than Captain Sanchez, but Palomino was the better horse.

The race was a flash of a moment. Both horses got off together and flew over the course, nose and nose, for the few seconds the race lasted. Each rider knew his horse; each was confident of success; nose and nose, neck and neck, they battled while the crowd cheered wildly. On the post, Palomino had the Santa Rosa buckskin beaten by about the width of his lip; and a great race ended in the joyous exaltation of the home forces.

Among those who were present at the race was James Alexander Forbes. Forbes was a Scot who had come to California in 1831 and was identified for many years with the development of and subsequent litigation over the famous Almaden quicksilver mines in Santa Clara county near San Jose. He was also vice-consul for Britain in California, and a judicious sportsman. At all important races, the presence of Senor Don Diego as judge of the contests was considered almost as important as that of the horses.

Also in attendance at the Palomino victory was William Glen Rae, the factor for the Hudson Bay Company, and son-in-law of Dr. McLaughlin, governor of the great fur company, who had established the post at Yerba Buena in 1841. Rae also was a Scot; he was also a sportsman and bon vivant, and owned a horse named El Grullo (the Crane), which was a mouse-colored animal with a good bit of speed, but was admittedly outclassed by Palomino.

At the close of the race, he challenged Don Jose Ramon to race Davis' buckskin against El Grullo over a course of six hundred yards for double the stakes that were wagered on the Palomino match.

Don Jose Ramon accepted the challenge and told Davis he would redeem the prestige of the Santa Rosa horse or perish in the attempt. Then the excitement in the crowd along the old Mission road bubbled up in renewed cheers and renewed wagering as the handsome Don and the equally handsome and dashing Scot rode down the course to the starting point.

But this time the race lacked the verve and excitement that vitalized the struggle between the two palominos. The start was perfect. Off shot the mouse-colored horse and the buckskin, neck to neck. In the first dozen strides, however, it was seen that Rae's mount was nowhere against the Spaniard's and Don Ramon' romped in a winner on Davis' horse, leaving El Grullo away down in the straight.

NERVY SALES PLANS

Business and professional men are frequently annoyed by mail order firms which send them goods not ordered, with a request that the merchandise be either paid for or returned. Such sales methods are entirely indefensible.

It is unfair to place upon a busy man the burden of wrapping and remailing stuff he does not want, yet the average person feels an obligation to pay for it or send it back. This method of alleged salesmanship no doubt produces results, or it would not be resorted to by the concerns which practice it.

One way of handling such cases is reported by the Dowagiac Bulletin. A doctor was sent $10 worth of cigars with the request to try them and remit if satisfied. In case he did not smoke, it was suggested that he could find some friend who would be glad to take them off his hands. The doctor wrote in reply:

"Cigars received. I enclose in payment two prescriptions well worth $10. If you do not need them, you can sell them to some friend."

TELEPHONES ESSENTIAL TO MODERN SKYSCRAPERS

The elevator made the skyscraper possible. Without the elevator all buildings would be "walk-ups." Their height would be limited by human ability and willingness to climb stairs.

The telephone made the skyscraper practicable. Without the telephone urgent messages would have to be carried in person or by messenger. Skyscraper elevators would be literally jammed with messenger boys. Business people, hurrying to or from the innumerable personal interviews that would be necessary, would face intolerable delays. In congested business centers even the streets would be crowded past endurance if all the messages now transmitted by telephone were carried by hand. Local transportation systems would be confronted with loads far beyond their capacity.

The skyscraper is an American development. So is the telephone. Each expresses the spirit of American enterprise. To be sure, the first skyscraper on record was the Tower of Babel. But that failed, we are told, for lack of adequate communication facilities.

A SNAKE STORY

Recently the editor of the Publishers' Auxiliary bemoaned the fact that good fish, snake and other animal stories have become scarce.

Perhaps there are no new ones, but we ran across one this week that was modestly accredited to "Exchange," which ought to qualify for the old scrap book, whether it is new or not.

A kind-hearted farmer up in North Dakota found a rattlesnake caught in a trap and compassionately released the snake and went on his way. The snake followed his liberator home and exhibited such friendliness that the farmer kept it as a pet. When the weather got cold, the rattler was allowed to sleep in the kitchen. One night, hearing a commotion downstairs, the farmer rushed down to find the snake tightly coiled about the neck of a burglar who had entered the house. The snake's tail was stuck out of the window, frantically rattling for the police.

A chafing dish is a frying pan that has gotten into the social register.

DREGING WORK BEGUN ON PORT PROJECT AT BELMONT

Following ground breaking exercises last Sunday, a huge dredge began work Monday on the Port San Francisco project at Belmont. More than 600 persons attended the ceremonies near Belmont railroad station.

Port San Francisco when completed will afford fourteen miles of deep water wharfage, two large turning basins that will allow the largest vessels to turn on their own power, and fourteen slips, all of 30-foot depth. Nineteen million cubic yards of dirt will have to be moved before the first unit of the great project is completed.
